NO DEARTH OF NEW BOOKS AT LONDON.

About Two Hundred Volumes of Fiction and Nearly as Many of Theology Announced.

CRIMINAL HEROES POPULAR.

Major Griffith's Articles on Crime and H. B. Irving's "Studies of French Criminals" Soon to Be Published.

London, March 22.-(Copyright, 1961, by the New York Herald Company.)-Much has been heard lately of the lamentations of publishers with regard to the coming spring publishing, but it would seem as if these lamentations were more a mere habit than anything else. Publishers may mean, but they still go on publishing. The prospects of the spring enson, they said some time ago, were anything but bright. Naturally a famine in books was expected, but that famine fills twenty-seven columns of the supple-ment of this week's Academy, which does not even profess to have recorded by any means all the books announced.

The classes of books most prominent in the list are fiction, of which there will be something like 200; theology, blography and history. In its numbers, theology falls lit-tle behind fiction. Of biography there are about fifty volumes; of history nearly as the behind fiction. Of biography there are about fifty volumes; of history nearly as many; of poetry, nearly a score.

The criminal hero seems to have extraordinary fascination for the litterateur. Claude Duval, "Dick" Turpin, Francois Villon, "Jack" Shepsard, Jonathan Wild, in various degrees, have appeared as heroes of romance in both drama and fiction. Major Griffiths has written innumerable articles on crime, criminals and prisons. His book is considered sufficiently popular for the Cassels to announce their bringing it out in six-penny parts.

It is now stated that young Mr. H. B. Irving's "Studies of French Criminals" will shortly be issued by Heinemann. Mr. Irving, who is the second son of Sir Henry, and whose interest in the abnormal was shown recently by his clever study of the notorious Judge Jeffreys, has analyzed the cynleism, refined cruelty and sheer brutality shown by such criminals as Lacenaire. Troppmann, Prado and Ravachoi. The opportunities afforded by the French criminal procedure for the complete exposure of the career and motives of an accused person give peculiar vividness to the French records of crime. Mr. Irving has endeavored to select those criminals whose individualities and misdeeds remove them from the category of ordinary maleractors. It may be interesting to know that long before Mr. Irving became an actor he was interested in the study of crime. His rooms at Oxford were piled high with criminal records. The same subject interested him during his brief career at the bar.

GOSSIP ABOUT BOOKS AND THEIR AUTHORS.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie's recent gifts of a million dollars to the St. Louis Public Li-bary will doubtless arouse fresh interest in his book, "The Gospel of Wealth, and Other his book, "The Gospel of Wealth, and Other Timely Essays," which is published by the Century Company. From it we quote this significant passage: "The gospel of wealth but echoes Christ's words. It calls upon the millionaire to sell all that he hath and give it in the highest and best form to the poor by administering his estate himself for the good of his fellows, before he is called upon to lie down and rest upon the bosom of Mother Earth."

Mother Earth."

General Bulier's suggestion that young officers should read military novels has created some amusement in London. It does not, however, follow that the idea is not a good one. Such a novel as Colonel Chesney's "Dilemma," which, by the by, seems to have been forgotten by most people, could not but be useful in many ways to the young officer. On the other hand, one can imagine hardly any books that would be more completely useless than the so-called military novels of Charles Lever. There is room for choice in military novels, as in most other things, and if General Buller had made a list of novels that he could confidently recommend to young officers, it is quite probable that the list would be a useful one.

"The Light of the World," by Herbert D. Ward, which Houghton, Mifflin & Co. are publishing, is a story of science and religion, showing considerable power of imagination. It is based on the rate at which light travels and the immeasurable distances in the heavens. Thus the spirit of a man ignoring these distances is enabled to place itself at such a distance from the carth that history is unrolled before its

"Sir Christopher." Maud Wilder Goodwin's forthcoming Colonial romance, introduces several favorite characters that appeared in "The Head of a Hundred," and also Romney Huntoon, a son of Humphrey Huntoon. The scene of the story is laid in Virginia and Maryland in 1644, and its climax deals with the attack on St. Mary's by Claborne, Ingle, and their men. The book will appear from the press of Little, Brown & Co., early in April.

The April number of the Smart Set is rich in attractions. Miss Elizabeth Duer contributes the first long story, "The Taming of Sylvia," a tale of modern New York society, told in the first person by its heroine, a healthy, athletic young woman. There is the charm of sanity and right thinking about it and the engaging quantities of a pretty love story.

Julien Gordon, Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger, has written a study of American life abroad in the romance of a young American girl in Rome, called "In Palace Gardens." Mrs. Sherwood tells about "Certain Patriotic Exiles," an account of the influential Americans who have made Paris their home.

Mrs. Poultney Bigelow has written a influential Americans who have made Paris their home.

Mrs. Poultney Bigelow has written a pretty little story with a tinge of humor and an unexpected ending in "The New Weekly." Another love story with a humorous twist is that written by Mary Fenollosa, and called "What Moved Her." Douglas St. George Huntington's contribution is a story of an anonymous letter, "The Weapon of a Woman." Clinton Ross's romance of "The Crown of Eastphaila" makes one think of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

makes one think of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

"The Dark Man at the Feast" is a story of a man's fear of detection for crime. It is written by Francis M. Livingston, and it has something of the dramatic in it. A clever little sketch of an embarrassing mistake made by an officious young Englishman in Guy Somerville's "The Compromising of Guennise." A cold-blooded, calculating woman was "The Wife of Lorraine," as portrayed by H. A. Keays. Kate Jordan's "Secret Strings" is the story of how a woman planned to run away from her husband and with another man, and conscience intervened to save her. The other stories, poems and bits of humor in The Smart Set are most entertaining.

Harper & Bros. will publish next week "The Love Letters of Victor Hugo," the Players' Edition of "Ben Hur," "Martin Brook," by Morgan Bates, and "The Four Georges" (Vols. 3 and 4), by Justin McCarthy.

J. A. Altsheler's new novel, entitled "The Wilderness Road," and said to be a romance of early expansion, is to be published this month by D. Appleton & Co. The scene is laid in Kentucky toward the end of the Eighteenth Century.

Mr. Bacheller's new romance "D'Rl and I." which will be issued in book form by the Lothrop Publishing Company September 15, will be illustrated by F. C. Yohn. This author's "Eben Holden" is now selling in its two hundred and fiftieth thousand.

Walter A. Wyckoff, the author of "The Workers," has written nothing on the subject for the last three years. He will reappear in the April Scribner's with the first of four or five papers founded in his experience as a day laborer.

Mrs. Gilbert's "Stage Reminiscences," which will be concluded in the April Scribner's, will be presented in book form next month with additional matter. The work will be uniform with Mrs. John Drew's "Reminiscences," also published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

waste that accumulate during a voyage); and "Napoleon," with a sketch of Joseph-ine, by Ida M. Tarbell, being a new and re-vised edition of Miss Tarbell's biography of the first Emperor of the French.

Doctor William Barry's new novel. "The Doctor William Barry's new novel. "The Wizard's Knot," to which we referred last week, will be presented in this country by the Century Company, April 3. The doctor, who is a well-known Catholic priest and theologian, a lecturer, traveler, student, and thinker, should not be confounded with the other writers of fiction bearing his name or names similar to it. names similar to it.

With the January-March number a change will be made in the direction of the journal of American Folk-Lore. The general management will be assumed by Doctor A. F. Chamberiain, Clark University, Worcester, Mass., Mr. W. W. Newell remaining as associate editor.

"Eben Holden," by Irving Bacheller, still maintains its prominence as the best-selling of recent books. For the past two months it has led The Bookman's reports of best-selling books. The two-hundred-and-fiftieth thousand is just coming from the press. Mr. Bacheller's new romance of the North country, "D'Ri and I," will be issued by Lethrop Publishing Company on September 15.

Lothrop Publishing Company on September 15.

Eden Philpott's new novel is to be called "The Good Red Earth," instead of "Johndal Fortnight," as first announced, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

The same publishers announce that "The Octopus," the new novel by Frank Norris, is to be the beginning of a remarkable uncertaking. Though a novel complete in itself, this will be the first of a Trilogy of the "Epic of Wheat," or three related novels, the first dealing with the production of wheat, the second with its distribution, and the third with the consumption of American wheat in Europe, altogether forming the story of a wheat crop from the time of its sowing in California, through the stock exchange gambling, based on it in Chicago, to its use as the relief of a European famine.

Nobody has been so unkind as to question

Nobody has been so unkind as to question Mr. Harolin Gariand's absolute sincerity in trying to write novels and stories that should be the genuine American article. He writes with a consistency that shames even Mr. Howells, and his sympathy for the robust and healthful in American life is subline. The public is now to have "der Mountain Lover" from the Century Company April 3. Durkag its course as a serial in the magazine is attracted some attention, probably owing to the fact that its hero suggests a sort of masculine counterpart of "Datsy Miller." His Colorado canchanan is a fine composite picture of a class to which the development of the great West owes a line composite picture of a class to which the development of the great West owes much.

Mr. W. A. Fraser, author of "Mooswa and Others," has just written for early publication in the Saturday Evening Post a short, stirring serial, entitled "The Outcasts."

The outcasts are an old buffalo and a wolf-dog, and the greater part of the story is about the strange comradeship and striking adventures of these companions, and their playmage, in company, to the distant plains of deep grass, of which the wolf-dog knew.

"The Heritage of Unrest," published by the Macmillans, seems to be attracting some attention on account of its treatment of a racial situation which has passed away but which dominated social and political conditions in the Southwest about thirty years ago. The author, Miss Gweindolen Overton, writes of frontier politicians, army posts and Indians with so much insight that we wonder if this is really her first book. It is a novel with the quality of history, at the same time holding its interest as fiction with all the fascination of a human document.

Henry Timrod, the Southern poet, who died in 1867, and who achieved the distinction of being the South's most representative ante-bellum singer, once delivered a lecture on "The Theory of Poetry" before a Southern literary club which has never yet been published. The Independent has obtained permission to reprint this remarkable essay, whose publication will be very timely now, in view of the fact that on May 1 a bust of the poet will be unveiled and publicly dedicated in the city of Charleston, S. C.

Charles Scribner's Sons have tublished "My Autobiography," by Professor Max Muller. This is a book of intimate personal charm and its pages live with men famous during the period covered by Professor Muller's life. An interesting feature of the book is the series of steel engravings, showing Professor Muller at the age of 4, at 14, at 29 and at 29, also portraits of his parents.

A new Getective novel is to appear soon. Miss Hildegard Brooks's novel, "Without a Warrant," soon to be issued by the Scribner's, was originally entitled "The Taking of McClure," but received its present name because in the Judgment of her publishers it was unfair to lay too much stress on the detective rather than the love interest in her narrative. It might be agreed in passing with the Boston writer that a good detective story would have strong chance for a popular hearing in the present surfeit of historical romances. Miss Brooks's work, by the way, supplies an instance of the fair hearing that new writers may attain by patience and devotion to their craft, it is said that her stories in manuscript had already attracted the attention of her publisher's readers, paying the way for the acceptance of her latest novel, which will undoubtedly have interesting successors. Miss Brooks lives in Newburg, N. Y., but is a frequent visitor in the South, whose types, both among the aristocrats and the poor whites, she characterizes with an unfailing hand.

The fiction announced by Messrs, Houghton, Mifflin & Co. for the spring has a surprisingly wide range of interest. Boston appears in a humorous story of the servant-girl problem. "The Successors of Mary the First," by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps; Chicago in a Toistolan novel by Will Payne cailed "The Story of Eva," and Paris in Eugenia Brooks Frothingham's "The Turn of the Read." Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Penelope's Irish Experiences" surveys Ireland; Coloniai Virginia appears in Burion E, Stevenson's romantic "Soldier of Virginia," and Europe in Clara Louise Burnham's "Miss Pritchard's Wedding Trip." Alice Brown paints a part of New Hampshire in "King's End." and for the sea there is "Dog-Watches at Sea." by Stanton King.

Sea." by Stanton King.

The struggle between the French and English for possession of the Ohio Valley was a momentous and dramatic phase of American history made memorable by Braddock's defeat. This episode has been made the theme of "A Soldier of Virginia: A Tate of Colonel Washington and Braddock's Defeat." by Burton Egbert Stevenson. Washington as a young officer is a prominent character, and justice is done Braddock both for his faults and virtues. The narrative is accompanied by a pretty love story, and has for a background a picture of Virginia society in the middle of the Eighteenth Century. The volume will be brought out by the Riverside Press early in March.

One of the most attractive of stories of the Revolution is just from the press of the Lippincott Company. It was written by Cyrus Townsend Brady, and is called
"When Blades Are Out and I ove's Afield."
General Greene's campaign in the Carolinas is the scene of the story, with the hattle of Guilford Courthouse as one of the most important events. Greene and Cornwallis are both introduced, but it is with the love affairs of two American girls that the story chiefly concerns itself. As a specimen of bookmaking, the novel is particularly desirable.

"The Curious Career of Roderick Camp-bell" is the title of a new novel written by Jean N. McIlwraith, the roted Cana-dian author. It is a well-concerved stery of an interesting period in Scottish and American history, that of the Jacobite up-rising and the beginnings of English Inter-est in Camada and along the St. Lawrence. An absorbing love story is the theme. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.) "The Curious Career of Roderick Camp-

The novel of adventure is always The novel of adventure is always especially valuable as entertainment when it is well put together, swift in action and thrilling in interest. All of this praise belongs to A. W. Marchmont's new book, "In the Name of a Woman," which has come from the press of Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. Political difficulties in the Balkan States furnish the background for a thrilling love story.

One of the best of the illustrated magazine has been rapidly gaining its present high merit since it has been under the editorship of the John Wanamaker Company of New York. The illustrations are especially attractive and the literary quality of the first order. The April number is of especial merit.

The first volume of a huge undertaking, "The Jewish Encyclopedia," will come from the press of the Funk & Wagnalls Company of New York in a few weeks, Over 300 eminent Jewish and non-Jewish scholars of the world are engaged on the work. Exploration, travel and research have brought to light much new material bearing on the various phases of Jewish history, thought and life. There has been much interest in Old Testament history and literature. All these scattered data have been gathered together for "The Jewish Encyclopedia."

Mrs. Mary Diuguid Davis has written a story of Southern life in the novel, "She waited Patiently." Mrs. Davis is a residence of the conductive's Magary and evidently zine; "A Sack of Shakings," by Frank T. kidnaping case is a well-known resident of Caden, where she has resided for a number of years.

Mrs. Henderson says she first met Henderson in California in 1859. Later, he came to Ogden, and they were married in September, 1859. Henderson first claimed to be an Australian, but prior to his marriage said he was H. E. Henderson, son of the Prosecuting Attorney of Marshalltown, In. After their marriage they went to Dallas, Tex., and lived in a fashionable boarding-house. Mrs. Henderson says they moved around to several places, and a year ago moved to Denver. While there she learned that Henderson was not the son of the Prosecuting Attorney at Marshalltown, In. She then left her husband and came to Ogden. Henderson followed shortly afterwards, and they went to Los Angeles, Cal. There he admitted the untruths about his fermer record, and was later arrested on some charge preferred by a woman. He got bail and was told to leave the country.

Mrs. Henderson says she heard nothing more from him until a few days ago, when a letter was received from Henderson, asking for funds to employ a lawyer to defend him on a trumped-up charge. He said that he had been accused of being conrected with the Chulaby kidnaping case, but that he was innocent. that he was innocent.

Doctor Edward Buck Confesses to Two Recent Weddings.

Indianapolis. Ind., March 22.-Doctor Ed ward T. Buck, the son of Dudley Buck, the composer, said Friday night: "It is true I was married to Louise Un-"It is true I was married to Louise Underhill at Asbury Park, August 16, 1896, but that the marriage was only a foolish trick. We never lived together afterward. I have not heard or seen her for two years. I was divorced from her in last October or November in Evansville. I was married to Miss Daisy Dean at Hoopeston, Ill., February 20, 1901. That is all there is to the thing."

The records of the Vanderburg County Circuit Court at Evansville show that Doctor Buck was granted a divorce from Louise Buck on January 19, 1901. Judgment went by default and Doctor Buck was inhibited from marrying for two weeks. When asked about the order of the court to-night he said he was not married the second time in Indiana and therefore had not disobeyed the order of the court. VAPOR STOVE TRUST NEXT.

All the Companies in United States May Combine.

Cleveland, O., March 22.-The Leader Sat-

Cleveland, O., March 22.—The Leader Saturday will say:
Representatives of the Vapor Stove Companies of America met to-day, with the object, it is said, of forming a vapor stove trust, into which all the companies manufacturing vapor stoves in America will be merged. The trust, it is said, will be known as the American Vapor Stove Company. The company will consist of $3,00,000 in preferred stock and $3,00,000 in common stock. The companies represented at the meeting have manufactories in Cleveland, St. Louis, Chicago and Mansfield and Lorain, C.

MAY "SQUEEZE" MAY RIBS.

Armour Interests Engineering New Deal of Importance.

Chicago. March 22.—Rumors were rife on the Board of Trade Friday that the Armour interests were engineering a deal in May ribs that bids fair to produce broader May ribs that bids fair to produce broader results than the persistently reported "squeeze" in May pork.

During the day the speculative interest that has centered about the market for hog products for several days was diverted from pork and fastened on the big deal in ribs which Armour & Co. are credited with having under way. having under way.

The Armour purchases of May ribs during the day amounted to over $,000,000 pounds, which comes near the limit of the supply which comes near the limit of the supply in the city available for delivery on May contracts. Under the active buying and covering by snorts the price advanced 22 cents over the quotations of the day before, touching $7.97\cdots and closing at $7.92\cdots. It is said there is little chance of an increase in the stock supply, which at present is about $6.00,000 pounds, between now and the end of May, owing to the active demand for meats, and that the large parchase of the Armour interests is the beginning of a "squeeze" in May pork which will be generally felt in the pit.

BIG FIRE AT MILWAUKEE.

Property Valued at $300,000 Destroyed Friday Night.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 22.-Fire Friday night completely wiped out the piano es-tablishment of William Rohlfing & Sons on tablishment of William Rohlfing & Sons on Broadway, between Wisconsin and Mason streets, and wrought further destruction to adjoining property, entailing a loss closs onto $300,900, fully covered by insurance.

The fire started in the Rohlfing store, a four-story structure, which was heavily stored with planos and sheet music. The building and contents were licked up within half an hour, and the fire quickly spread to buildings on either side.
